Thought for the Week from S.A.D.D.: Teens have been inundated with messages about the dangers of texting while driving over the past several years and, while this message is still vitally important, texting is not the only danger popping up on their smartphone. According to new research conducted by Liberty Mutual Insurance and SADD, while 27 percent of teens today still report texting and driving, a bigger concern is that two out of three teens (68 percent) admit to using apps while driving. In fact, when asked to rank the driving behaviors they perceived to be most dangerous, looking at or posting to social media apps ranked much lower as compared to texting and driving or driving under the influence of alcohol, for example.

🌻 ENJOY SPRING BREAK - April 10-14 🌻

April Career Speaker - Tuesday, April 18

Interested in a Technical Career Pathways Workshop? Come listen to the April Career Speaker!
